

Jack's Nature Journal
4-13-09

This morning, it was chilly mostly because of the whistling wind, which was quite cold. It wasn't even that fast today compared to yesterday, when it was roaring along. This morning, it came from the NNW at a recorded high of 7.8 mph. The sky was a beautiful blue, only three oktas full of wispy cirrus clouds. As I stated earlier, it was chilly at the start of the walk, but by the end it warmed up to about 55.8°F and 13.8°C. The air pressure was 30.15 inHg and the humidity was 25%. It was bright and sunny outside.

Today, we heard a lot of very angry-sounding birds flying around in the woods (they might have been sparrows), saw some crows, some sparrows and what we think was an Eastern Pheobe sitting in a tree by the side of the road. We also saw a squirrel.