

Jack's Nature Journal

2-19-09

When we started out this morning, the sky was cold and gray, it was drizzling, and a dense fog obscured everything. Then, halfway through the walk, it cleared up to reveal sunny skies full of cumulus and altocumulus clouds. Go figure! Anyway, on our way back I was starting to wish that I had brought sunglasses and a hat, as the wind was cold and whistling along, and the sun was getting in my eyes. Unfortunately, the highest wind speed I managed to capture was 2 mph from the East. The temperatures are 42.6°F and 5.9°C, the humidity is 85% (although it was 96% earlier today) and the air pressure is 29.44 inHg.

This morning we heard some Canada Geese as they flew over, but never saw them. A crow hopped from tree to tree, cawing. Lastly, we saw a turkey vulture.