

Jack's Nature Journal
2-24-09

There weren't really very many clouds this morning, only one okta of cirrocumulus clouds that drifted lazily along. The wind really started blowing this morning, reaching speeds of up to 14.5 mph from the NW. The trees were really waving, and some of the flags in the cemetery looked like they were going to lift off the ground! The air pressure this morning is 30.30 inHg, the humidity is 40% and the temperatures are 30.6°F and -0.8°C. It is very sunny.

As soon as we stepped out the door this morning we saw some crows flapping away, some sparrows flying about, and a very cute mockingbird in a bush. Further along in the same bush, we saw a partially eaten Blue Jay, which was kind of icky. Some turkey vultures soared above us, quite low, and cast their shadows on the road. Lastly, we saw some really big crows.