

Given what you have learned in this lecture, can you explain why some adults who were abused physically or mentally as children show abnormalities specifically within limbic system structures?

Because they might, from experience, subconsciously associate bad things with certain gestures or situations. This would be due to bad emotions being associated with memories in the limbic system.