On our walk this morning, it poured and poured and Poured. The rain was coming down in buckets (well, not really, that would hurt quite a bit). I held the umbrella protectively over my head as the rain thundered down, but it did little to help as the rain was quite often swept up by a rushing wind and sent at you horizontally. My pants got pretty soaked. Speaking of wind, I'm afraid to say that I didn't get a very high wind recording this morning, as I wasn't willing to stand around in the rain for hours waiting for one. I only got 3 mph from the NW, and then I said "That's good enough for me!" and ran inside. The air pressure was 30.09 inHg, the humidity is 83%, and the temperatures are 44.6°F and 6.8°C. Quite a drop from yesterday!

This morning we saw nothing but rain and mud... and some little bluebirds flitting from tree to tree.
