

Jack's Nature Journal
3-20-09

One day left until spring and it starts snowing! I was very surprised when it began while I was outside taking the wind speed. It is a light snow, and it is not going to settle because the surface temperature is above zero. The wind is coming from the North West at a high of 11.5 mph, which is very high, considering the nice, calm days we have been having. The temperatures are much lower that they have been also, at 38.8°F and 3.8°C. The air pressure is 30.30 inHg and the humidity is 45%. It is chilly and cumulus clouds layered with altostratus clouds fill 6 oktas of the sky.

We saw a bluebird sitting on a telephone wire, chirping to himself in a very strange, high-pitched way.