

1. No Adjectives

Today we went to Food Heaven, which is a restaurant near us. We had potatoes in gravy. The light at the table attracted bugs. The waiter chewed a pen. The other diners glared at us. We were not impressed.

2. No Pronouns

As our family ate an unsatisfying meal, we watched the family at the next table. The father was eating what looked like fried slugs but were probably French fries. The son was picking up the French fries and throwing them at the father's face. The father didn't look terribly happy about this.

3. No Prepositions

The rather disgruntled looking family sitting a few feet away comprised of an angry, cell-phone-toting mother, and three whiny children. The father was unconscious. One of the children's balls had hit him. His wife threw her cell phone. She threw it. The children ducked. It missed, hit the floor and shattered.

4. No Conjunctions

A bit further away, a couple were making a fuss. Apparently, their meal of fried chicken wasn't as chicken-ish as they had wanted. They complained. They threatened to sue. Finally, the chef brought them a big pot of boiling chicken soup. He dumped it on their heads. I think they will be suing.
